DAVIES ARNOLD COOPER WINS 2012 PLANNING CONTRACT FROM THE METROPOLITAN POLICE

Davies Arnold Cooper has been appointed by Metropolitan Police and Metropolitan Police Authority to provide legal planning advice concerning the impact of the London 2012 Olympic Games on its real estate assets and operations. The firm won a contract with a term of up to five years after a competitive pitch process.

Davies Arnold Cooper will help The Metropolitan Police and Metropolitan Police Authority to secure the land and facilities required to police the Games effectively. Legacy issues will also play a crucial role and Davies Arnold Cooper will advise on structures to create effective post-Olympics policing for the new communities that will be formed as part of the 2012 legacy.

Tim Johnson, Head of Planning and Partner at Davies Arnold Cooper, said:

“The need to provide safety and security for an event of the scale of the Olympics, combined with the need to consider legacy issues, throws up a whole host of planning issues, some of which have no prior precedent. We are looking forward to partnering with The Metropolitan Police and Metropolitan Police Authority to meet these challenges and secure a lasting legacy for the Olympics.”
